

BPL has tremendous potentially positive implications for many "Smart Grid" concepts being developed by National Laboratories to solve our power grid problems. It should be pursued on that front, regardless of whether it provides residences with competitive broadband internet. Several ideas for improving grid reliability depend on the ability of the utilities to connect to our meters and appliances. BPL is a way to accomplish that. Don't kill it.